Scientific interests and vision of the role of social sciences

The scientific interests in the course of over twenty years of scientific activity, research and high consultancy can be traced back to the following macro-themes. The topics indicated can be found in the following sections: Publications, Invited speaker, Didactics and High consultancy.

1. International environmental protection: from the doctrine of sustainable development to the precautionary principle of international law and the European New Green Deal. Protection of marine biodiversity in international law; Climate change litigation.
2. Legal systems facing the test of technological changes: privacy, data protection and digital human rights
3. Corporate social responsibility: Protection of human rights and the environment in the OECD Guidelines for multinational companies, Freedom of expression of thought,
4. International Law of the Sea and, in particular: Maritime security; Protection of marine biodiversity in areas beyond national jurisdiction; Exclusive economic zone; Contiguous area; Legal regime of extreme environments such as Antarctica, the Arctic and the high seas; protection of the marine environment; underwater cultural heritage; Blue growth, Delimitation of maritime zones; Legal regime of fisheries and fisheries conflicts;

5. Governance and legal regime of the Mediterranean Sea: Maritime conflicts; Issues of security and international cooperation.
6. Adaptation of domestic law to international law: State and regional competences and substitute power; Participation of the regions in the ascending and descending phase of EU law.
7. Fundamental rights and freedoms: Freedom of religion and the European Court of Human Rights; Hate speech.
8. Relations between Member States and the EU in exclusive and concurrent matters: Role of the EU in the management and conservation policy of fisheries resources; EU fisheries agreements;
9. Responsibility of the member state for the obligations of the international organization; responsibility of the Member State for facts attributable to judicial bodies.
10. Principle of self-determination of peoples and free availability of economic and natural resources.

Through the experience gained in the various contexts of activity, university and CNR, but also in the dialogue with other Departments and disciplines, with decision-making and organizational organizations, national and international, as well as with sectors of civil society and the productive world, I was able to ascertain that the greatest challenge for the social sciences consists in pursuing an ever higher methodological rigor and scientific accuracy in the research activity but, at the same time, being able to respond flexibly to requests for concrete solutions to real problems and major challenges of contemporary society from other areas of scientific research, from the country's production sector and from civil society. In this way, listening to the needs of society and monitoring the evolution of the social, economic and legal dynamics and systems of the international community and of the country, a constant tension is ensured towards the identification of frontier social research and the overcoming of borders of traditional research.
